

HOUSING IS UNAFFORDABLE FOR MANY HOUSEHOLDS IN PERTH-HURON

AFFORDABLE

Unfortunately, many households pay more than the recommended 30% of their income on housing, because local housing costs have risen dramatically.

Asking Rents are Too High for Workers in Key Sectors

These are the sectors with the most posted vacancies in 2023, with their median posted wage:

The Rental Wage is what each full-time earner in a household would need to earn to afford asking rents at 30% of their income, with no government assistance.

Rents are too high for single-earner households and for workers in hospitality, retail, and manufacturing. A single individual working at posted hospitality/retail wages would spend 52% of their income on rent.

Many individuals who can't work depend on social assistance benefits like Ontario Works (OW) and the Ontario Disability Support Program (ODSP). Households relying on these programs would have to spend between 52% and 160% of their monthly income to pay asking rents.

"I am a professional in a full-time, permanent position. My rent per month for an old apartment that has many issues is more than one of my paycheques."
